[6] 次の英文を読んで、後の設問に答えなさい。

A couple of years ago, I went to Australia for a conference with my colleague, Chris. We decided to drive across country to Brisbane after the conference ended. The ①(to / four / drive / days / was / take / going) and most of it was across the desert, so we had to take food, water, and extra gas with us.

The first day was a lot of fun as we were excited and laughing at each other's stupid jokes. ②By the third day of driving in the seemingly endless desert, we began to get bored. We had been quiet for a few hours when in the distance Chris spotted some kangaroos. We were both excited and decided to get a closer look. Chris accelerated to catch up with the kangaroos. We got closer and closer, and Chris was doing 110 kilometers per hour. We were very close to the kangaroos — too close — when we heard a loud BANG!

Chris stopped the car and we got out. ③Behind the car was a large kangaroo lying completely still on the ground.

A

I started laughing but ④Chris looked very serious. He said his wallet and passport were in the jacket. I started laughing even harder. ⑤I stopped laughing, however, when he said that our car keys were also in the jacket!

[7] 次の英文を読んで、後の設問に答えなさい。

"Can I take your order?" Night after night, I had to repeat this phrase as I waited tables in my family's restaurant. My father was a famous chef and the restaurant was always (ア)packed, so I was always busy. My father loved cooking and spent most of his time in the kitchen. He wanted me to cook with him, but I hated the restaurant business. Because of the restaurant, I never had a social life, and while other fathers would play soccer with their sons, my father was always busy. I thought he was (A)[more / what / than / about / concerned / his food] I was doing.

Throughout high school and college, I worked with my family, but always avoided the kitchen area and my father. I was (イ)impatient to graduate so I could move away from the family business and start my own life. As graduation day (ウ)drew near, my father and I started looking at new cars. It was the first time (B)[I / time / that / remembered / spending / my father] with me outside the restaurant. The week before graduation we found the perfect car. I was sure that my father would buy it and give it to me on graduation night.

On the night of graduation, my father handed me a gift-wrapped book. It was my father's old, food-stained cookbook. I was so angry that I threw the cookbook down and (エ)stormed out of the house. I could not believe that with [①] of his money and [①] of the time that I had spent working in the restaurant, [①] I would get was that old cookbook. Plus, he knew I hated cooking!

I soon moved away and after many years became successful in my own business. Although I often saw my father at holidays, our relationship (オ)was strained and we never talked about the graduation gift. Then one day, I got a call that my father was in hospital. I went to see him because I (C)[and wanted / make / very anxious / sure / was / to] he would be OK.

That night at my parents' home, I was looking through my father's books with my mother. I came across the cookbook that he had given me years ago. I carefully opened the cookbook, filled with my father's handwritten notes, and went through the pages. Midway through, I found (カ)something that made my eyes filled with tears. It was (力)a check, dated the day of my graduation, made out in the exact amount needed for the car we had picked out all those years ago.
